Star
By BESSIE HARRIS

Long before Joe's fishing boat came within sight of shore he watched for the distant speck of light from the window, and as he neared land the speck of light grew and shone with his own delight in coming. Home coming was a never failing delight to Joe. He loved to warm his heart at the thought of the picture there, big blonde Elizabeth, the older sister, bristly busy about the sitting room stove, preparing for his evening meal the things he liked best—and Star, the small wraith of a sister, curled up in the couch corner, where she could easily part the curtains and peer out over the dark waters. For Star watched for Joe's white fishing boat as eagerly as his eyes searched out the light from the window.

Lisbeth was a born grinder, and perhaps sometimes the work did fall too heavily on her broad shoulders, for though Star might be wastful and willing, her strength was insufficient for many tasks.

The cozy cottage on the shore had been handed down from grandparents to the three children. And now all their plans to beautify the cottage were made in the hope of pleasing Star, the prettiest clothes were hers, and it was Elizabeth who still grudgingly arranged for her many pleasures. And Star was radiantly grateful, her love for the big bronzed brother and the sister whose own life had known but the happiness of service, was beyond expression. As for Joe, the mere thought of her there in the lamp-lit corner, brought a strange lump in his throat. In an emotion which dimmed his clear eyes as he stared toward the light. It was Elizabeth who held open the door for him, her rosy cheeks and white apron always a pleasant part of his welcome home picture. But it was to little Star that he turned breathlessly, as she slipped from her couch to stand laughing softly and holding out eager hands. "I watched you," said Star, "since I first saw you far across the sky, and could not tell whether you were wave or really boat."

"And while you watched?" grumbled Lisbeth, "I rolled cookies and biscuits till my arms ached, and they will burn in the oven this minute unless they are attended to. Star, you might at least take the pans from the oven while I talk to Joe."

"I will take them," Joe offered quickly, and was off to the kitchen. That evening, when the girl had hidden them good night, flustering, her shining eyes crossing them both from the doorway, Elizabeth turned abruptly to her brother.

"Joe," she said, "I have something to tell you. Something that I only learned today. I was hunting in the old Bible for my birth date; thought I'd made a mistake of a year, and looked it up. And there, folded in the birth and death place was an old letter. Seemed queer as I looked that Star's birth had never been registered with ours—but the letter explained that. Mother had written it before she died, and left it there for safe keeping. Thought perhaps I'd find it when I went to write the date of her death. But I didn't think to do it, Joe. I will give you mother's letter in a minute, but this is what it said: Star isn't our sister at all; she never has—belonged. One night when we were away at school a boat came drifting along without any folks, or any ours, and in it all wrapped and quiet, lay a baby. First, mother thought the tiny white face was a reflection of one big star that seemed somehow to keep shining down on the boat. But when she found what it was, mother sent father out to bring in the boat, and the baby's eyes shined up at her she said, staidly and shiny like the star. And so she named her. No one ever came to claim the baby, and though father tried to learn at the time, there was no word of accident or loss. That's all, Joe; but I've given my young life, it seems, to the care of a child not kith or kin. And I have kept from marrying Jed Warren because of what I considered my duty." Lisbeth paused.

"I shall marry him now," she said determinedly.

Joe made no reply. When at last his sister went sulkily to bed, he read the letter slowly through. Then with face aglow, big Joe jumped to his feet.

"Star," he called softly, "oh, my little Star."

There was no answer. Vaguely troubled, Joe went out to the sands stinking where the water stretched silvering before him in the moonlight. Not far from shore he saw a drifting boat. Star's own little boat, with the blue Star at its side that he had painted. The girl sat in the stern, a dejected figure, he could see her dark hair rippling over her shoulders as it used to do when years ago she came at bedtime for his goodnight kiss. Joe strode out into the water. When he reached the boat's side the water was still beneath his strong arm. Star turned to him calmly.

"I heard it all," she said, "and I am going to drift out of your lives as I drifted in. Some place I shall find—"

"Joe," he said, "I have had her in his arms. Your mother is home, dear love," he said. "Don't you know that we have always belonged to each other?"

"Always?" breathed Star; the word was a question. Then her arms went about his neck.

"Always," she answered him softly.

FARM STOCK

POSSIBILITIES WITH SHEEP

Farmer Who Does Not Utilize All of Available Pasturage Is Throwing Money Away.

The keeping of a reasonable number of sheep on the average farm does not necessitate the keeping of fewer dairy cows or other grazing stock. This fact was demonstrated by the United States Department of Agriculture in the recent investigation of sheep-raising possibilities in New England. It was found that farms which keep sheep are kept successful.

Frequently Sheep Can Be Pastured on Land Which Would Not Otherwise Be Used for Grazing. So That They Do Not Displace Any Other Stock on Farm.

have practically the same number and kinds of other live stock as other farms of like area where no sheep are kept, and that the average increase in the two classes of farms is substantially the same. The inference is that the farmer who keeps no sheep is simply throwing away enough pasturage that cows and other live stock do not utilize to get him a neat profit.

IMPROPER FEEDING OF PIGS

One Big Reason Why Fall Porkers Prove Unprofitable in the Hands of Many Farmers.

One reason why fall pigs prove unprofitable in the hands of many farmers is improper feeding. Many persons have the mistaken idea that a pig must be fed a light ration until it is four or five months old to give it a chance to grow, which is one of the biggest mistakes a hog raiser can make. As soon as fall pigs will eat grain and while they are still sucking their dams, give them all the grain they will eat. In fact, the best thing is to have them run to a trough or a self-feeder where they can find corn, oats, tankage or some other feed whenever they want it. After they are weaned keep them right on a ration of that sort until they are ready for the market. If you have a self-feeder, put shelled corn or ear corn in one part of it and tankage in another, or provide separate self-feeders one for the corn and one for the tankage, and then let the pigs be the judge of how much to eat of each constituent.

CHECK DISEASE AMONG HOGS

Animals Become Infected with Tuberculosis Principally From Following Cattle.

Eliminating tuberculosis from cattle will practically solve the problem of controlling the disease among swine. That is the opinion of veterinary experts experienced in the handling and post-mortem examination of swine received at the principal market centers. By means of a simple and practical method, hogs may be detected with distinguishing letters and figures, and when disease is found by post-mortem examination the identity of such animals is known. With a simple system of records it is thus possible to trace a shipment to its farm from which it came and stamp out infectious diseases at their source. Evidence shows that swine become infected with tuberculosis principally from cattle, either by following them in feed lots or pastures, by receiving infected dairy by-products, or by eating tuberculous carcasses.

DISPOSE OF SURPLUS BULLS

If Not Sold at Minimum Price Within Reasonable Time, Convert Them Into Steers.

Some of the breeders have adopted the policy of putting a minimum price on the bulls which they have for sale. If the bulls do not sell in a reasonable time at this price, then they are castrated and good steers are made out of them. This protects the market and the quality of stock which they are selling.

Yellow Corn More Nutritious. Many careful and observant stock feeders have long contended that yellow corn produces better results than white corn.

On the second day it is as tall as a man and in less than three weeks the bamboo rods are from 18 to 20 inches in circumference and tower to a height of 60 or 70 feet. There is one place in Abasco, La., where McHoskey has grown a grove that reached to 70 feet in 10 days. There is a variety of bamboo that is edible, and which is prized by orchardists, who eat the young shoots and use the rest for food.

VARIETY OF FOOD IS ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY FOR HEALTH OF CHILD

Pie With Jelly, Egg and Toast, Greens, Milk, Bread and Butter Make Admirable Noon Day Meal for Youngster

Simple, clean, wholesome food of the right kinds fed to children in the proper quantities will go further, home economists specialists declare, toward assuring youngsters normal health and a sturdy constitution than any other factor. Yet, even in this land of plenty many children are undernourished. If they were all in homes where the income was small, this would be understandable, but surveys show that as many cases of malnutrition are to be found in well-to-do homes as in those which possess less of this world's goods.

What is the trouble if a child who is given plenty of food is undernourished? What more can a parent do for his child, physically weaker than provide an abundance of food? Those who have made a study of the matter declare that the kind of food that a person eats is almost as important as the quantity, and they see the trouble with the health of many children in this country today is not that they are getting too little food, but rather that they are getting too much of some kinds and not enough of others.

Avoid a One-Sided Diet.

A child between 2 and 4 years of age may be considered well fed if he has plenty of milk, bread, and other cereal food, an egg or its equivalent in flesh foods once a day, a little butter, a small portion each of carefully selected fruits and vegetables, with a small amount of sweet foods after his appetite for other food is satisfied. If any of these classes of food is omitted, his diet is likely to be one-sided.

The following bills of fare for children's meals are suggested by food specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The meals are simple, easy to prepare, and sufficiently varied to satisfy any normal child's appetite. Other foods of the same class may be substituted, when one wishes, for any dish in these.

menus without materially changing the balance of the meal.

In each day's meals for a child enough milk should be included to make up the required daily amount of 1 quart.

Children's Breakfasts.

Orange, juice and Stewed prunes (apples and juice only for the youngest children).
Fruit with milk, cereal, bread and butter.
Apple sauce, oatmeal with milk, toast and butter.

Baked potato, popovers, and fruit, or the youngest child.
Fruit, milk, cereal, and bread.
Cereal, milk, and fruit.

Children's Dinners.

Meat, soup, egg, cereal, string beans, rice, potatoes, baked potato with meat gravy, baked potatoes, stewed celery, boiled rice with hot sauce or soup.

Roast beef, baked potatoes, creamed carrots, bread, butter, and sugar sandwiches.

Children's Suppers.

Baked potatoes, baked potatoes, and salt with milk gravy, cookies, milk, toast, stewed prunes, cup cake.

Bread and milk, apple sauce, sponge cake, celery milk soup, toast, floating island.

Potato-milk soup, twice baked bread, marmalade, waffles.

CEREAL FOOD IS ECONOMICAL

One Variety or Another Forms Large Part of Almost Every Whole-Some and Frugal Diet

Cereal food of one kind or another forms a large part of almost every wholesome and economical diet. As a general rule, the greater the part played by cereals the cheaper the diet. Up to a certain point one may cut down the quantity of meat, eggs, butter, sugar, fruits and vegetables used and substitute cereal foods, but food specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture say there is a limit beyond which this cannot be safely done.

A sample day's ration for a family of father, mother and three young children in which cereals are used as freely as is considered wise, contains about four and one-half pounds of bread, or its equivalent in a variety of cereal foods; two quarts of milk; one and one-fourth pounds of medium-fat meat; ten ounces of butter or other fat; one-half pound of sugar; and four or five pounds of fruits and vegetables. In this diet the cereal foods supply about one-half of the protein.

DELICACIES AFTER HOLIDAYS

Prepare Enough of Christmas Cake or Plum Pudding to Serve in Case of Emergency.

Make enough of the Christmas fruit cake or plum pudding so you can have some on hand to serve in emergencies after the holidays. Both puddings and cakes which are rich in fruits improve with age.

HOUSEHOLD FACTS

Fry noodles in peanut oil and drain on blotting paper.

Bed linen and towels can be quickly ironed for ordinary use if the wringer is made very tight and used to flatten them out.

When using pink rhubarb for rhubarb sherbet do not skin it. The dessert will be a beautiful color.

FAT ABSORPTION IN COOKING DOUGHNUTS

Amount Varies Greatly on Different Occasions.

Frying Under Fat Requires Less Time Than When They Are Floated in It—Amount of Flour in Dough Determines Quality.

That fat absorption by fried batters and doughs will vary greatly in amount on different occasions, that the more flour there is in a dough the less fat it absorbs in frying, that reducing the time of frying lessens fat absorption, and that frying doughnuts under fat requires less time than when they are floated in it, are some of the results disclosed in a long series of experiments which the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture has completed recently.

Twenty pounds of dough can be so made up and fried as to take up ten pounds of fat in frying or so made up and fried as to take up only one pound of fat. Doughnuts made with plenty of sugar, butter and eggs absorb more fat than those which are less rich. The more flour incorporated in the dough, the less the fat absorption, but sometimes it is at the expense of the quality of the doughnut.

The longer doughnuts are kept in the frying fat, whether because the fat is not hot enough or because the doughnuts are too thick, the greater will be the amount of fat they take up. At 185 degrees C., the temperature fat should be when doughnuts are put in, three minutes will suffice for cooking those which have been rolled to one-fourth inch thickness. If the doughnuts are allowed to float in the fat, if doughnuts are forced under the fat during the frying, the experiments made prove that better doughnuts will result with less expenditure of time and fuel. Dough rolled to one-fourth inch thickness can be cooked in one and one-half minutes by this method at a temperature of 185 degrees C. This method of submersion was found to reduce the cracking during frying and the consequent fat absorption.

Who Are They?

Hordes of immigrants are pouring into this country every day from all sections of the old world. There seems to be no end to the flow.

But who are they? Are they men and women who will become good, law abiding, producing citizens, or are many of them malecontents whose chief aim in life is to incite trouble?

It has been hinted that some of our consuls abroad are not overly careful in the issuing of passports to foreigners desiring to come to this country.

And it is a well known fact that shipping agencies will take about any one with the price of passage—if their bones will hold together long enough to get abroad ship.

There is grave danger that among this great army of immigrants there may be vast numbers who are coming here for the express purpose of creating trouble—when serious aim is the overthrow of the government.

The radical leaders abroad would like nothing better than to pour an army of emissaries into this country to undermine our established system of law and order.

In all likelihood it is being done even now.

Sustain The Teacher.

Many people who send their children to school are too ready to pass judgment and reprove upon the teacher.

It frequently happens that a child must be punished for its misconduct. Failure to inflict punishment would destroy all discipline in the school and exert a demoralizing influence over other and better pupils.

But parents seldom see the faults of their own children.

In many cases the teacher is promptly condemned and the unruly child is upheld in its misdeeds.

When we see smoke we at once look for the fire which causes it.

And when a child receives punishment in a school we should be equally diligent in looking for the cause which prompted its infliction.

In no other way can school authorities maintain discipline, and a school without discipline is not worthy the name.

Oil Up And Speed Up.

The oil situation in the United States is becoming serious. Our production is far below consumption, and when our reserve supply becomes exhausted we will have to depend upon imports or go without.

England is wise, we are foolish. She is rapidly securing a strong foothold in the oil fields of other countries, and increasing her holdings from day to day. When we are destitute of oil she will have plenty.

There is no earthly reason why the United States should not be developing vast fields of oil lands in other countries. That is, no reason except our own supine indifference and procrastination.

When machinery lacks oil its parts become dry, friction is increased, it becomes overheated, and loses speed, or put out of business.

That is what ails us. We need oiling up. We need speed. We need to reach out and gather in some of the oil fields that are waiting for development before England and other countries gobble them all up.

We need that oil now, from which to make gasoline for our millions of automobiles, and trucks, and farm tractors, and for the hundred and one other uses to which we put it.

In time there will be a vastly greater need of it.

But difference and procrastination will not suffice.

We need action, swift and decisive, in order to head off other countries who want ALL of this oil.

Oil up and speed up.

Enough To Make A Brass Monkey Laugh.

(Shelbyville News)

"I don't know," said a grand stand play about getting El Morrow to call a special session of the legislature to place a tax on coal mined in this State is enough to make a brass monkey laugh. If Mr. Morrow knows anything to serve that the coal barons over the Republican party in Kentucky body boots and bristles. His money must be very short indeed. It has been reported that he was in the legislature last spring when Representative Dave Howell, of Woodford county, and everything else that could be advanced for the coal and was never able to even get it out of the committee to which it had been referred by the Republican Speaker of the House, who himself is largely interested in the production of coal. There is no question but that the coal barons are riding to a fat for they have for years evaded their just proportion of taxation and since the beginning of the year have robbed the public of millions of dollars by their extraordinary prices for this necessary commodity. When the barons of Kentucky get tired of carrying the burden of taxation, they will be glad to hear that they will be glad to pay for their part of the cost of the coal. But the coal barons will never pay their part of the cost of the coal. The Republican party?

Terrill.

Mrs. Mary Terrill, aged 77 years, of the town of Terrill, Mo., died at her home, Terrill, Mo., on Sunday, Dec. 5, 1920. She was born in the town of Terrill, Mo., and was the wife of John Terrill, who died in 1918. She was a member of the Presbyterian church and was a devout Christian. She was a kind and loving mother and a devoted wife. Her death was a great loss to her family and the community.

Christian Church Notes

A service of devotion was held at the Christian Church, Lancaster, Ky., on Sunday, Dec. 6, 1920. The service was held at 10 o'clock and was attended by a large number of people. The pastor, Rev. J. E. Robinson, gave the invocation and the prayer. The hymns were "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Jesus Christ, My Lord and King." The reading of the scriptures was from the Gospel of Matthew. The sermon was on the subject of "The Kingdom of God is Within You." The service was a most inspiring and uplifting one.

The regular Sunday School service will be held in the morning at the regular hour. At 12 o'clock, or shortly thereafter, dinner will be served and a social hour enjoyed. At about 2 o'clock the afternoon service will begin. Old time hymns will be sung, nothing but the old ones. Preaching will follow and then the congregation will be dismissed for the day. No evening services will be held.

Every member of the congregation is expected to be present with a well-filled basket. All members of the Christian Church are most cordially invited to all the "banquets." In fact all friends of the congregation are "free strangers" with no limit on what they may bring.

Frankfort, Ky. The fact that the biggest coal producing counties in Kentucky are to the independent class drawing from the State treasury money to support their schools and courts in excess of the amounts they contribute in taxes, only half reveals the extent of their dependence, according to statistics in the Department of Education.

Everyone of them draws from the State for the support of its schools more than it contributes to them itself. Floyd draws four times as much, Knox nearly four times, Bell, Johnson, Letcher, Laurel, Middlesboro and Wayne three times. Harlan, Boone, Clay and Perry draw as much.

Stage Is Set For Extra Session Of Legislature

Washington, D. C.—The stage is all set for an extra session of the Kentucky Legislature this winter. This information was gleaned from a number of leading Republicans, who are members of Congress and who are keeping in touch with the State authorities in the States that are nominally Democratic but which at present have Republican legislatures. Governor Morrow will issue a call for an extraordinary session as soon as Congress passes a bill establishing a unit of apportionment under the census of 1920. This legislation is to be rushed through Congress as soon as possible during the coming short session.

The purpose of the extra short session which Governor Morrow has decided to call will be to reappoint the State of Kentucky into Congressional Districts.

My Work

"Let me but do my work, from day to day. In field or forest, at the desk or loom. In meeting market place or tranquil room. Let me but find it is my heart to say. When vernal wishes beckon me astray."

"This is my work, my blessing, not my doom; Of all who live, I am the one by whom."

My work can best be done in the right way. Then shall I find it not too great or small.

To suit my fancy or to prove my powers; Then shall I cheerfully greet my laboring hours.

And cheerfully turn when the long shadows fall. At eventide, and play and love and rest. Because I know for me my work is best."

DEVICES REDUCE AMOUNT OF WORK

Daily Attention to Carpets Tends Greatly to Lighten Periodic Cleaning.

REMOVABLE RUGS ARE HANDY

Arrangement of House, Wise Selection of Furnishings and Use of Labor-Saving Contrivances Assist Housekeepers.

Changed living conditions have brought changes in house-cleaning methods. When houses were less completely heated, and parts of them were closed during the cold months, spring house-cleaning was necessary to get the closed rooms ready for use during the warm months, and fall house-cleaning was necessary to prepare the house for winter. Nowadays, all the rooms in most houses are used and kept clean throughout the year, and the use of removable rugs and some of the new cleaning devices make it much easier to take the dirt out day by day or week by week. Not all housekeepers realize how much the work of keeping things clean can be lessened by choosing the right things and handling them in the right way. This is not merely a matter of labor-saving devices like vacuum cleaners, but depends partly on how the house is planned, what furnishings and fixtures are used, and how the work of caring for them is organized.

Daily Care of Carpets

For the daily care of wooden or cotton carpets and rugs, a carpet sweeper is very good because it takes up lint and coarse dirt without raising the dust. For more thorough cleaning, some other appliance must be used.

Vacuum Cleaner Removes Dirt Easily and the Air Is Not Filled With the Dust.

The brushes of the carpet sweeper do not go deep enough into the carpet to remove fine dirt. A vacuum cleaner is excellent, but if that is not available, effort should be made to find some other thorough but comparatively dustless process. Using a dampened broom and scattering left-over tea leaves, bits of crumpled, dampened newspaper, or one of the commercial sweeping preparations on the carpet before sweeping, helps to prevent dust from flying. These dampened materials must be used with caution, however, or stains will result, especially on delicately colored carpets. Wiping a carpet with a dampened cloth after sweeping removes more dust and freshens the carpet.

Small rugs should be cleaned out of doors, if possible, preferably on the dry grass or dry snow. They should be placed right side down, beaten with a flat carpet beater, swept, turned over, and swept again. Hanging rugs over a line while they are being cleaned or holding them by the corners and shaking them strains them badly. It may break the threads or loosen the bindings and cause the ends to unravel.

Using Soap and Water on Rugs.

Practically all rugs, after thorough beating, may be cleaned with soap and water. Ray rugs may be washed like any other heavy material, but they must be rinsed thoroughly. Sometimes it is easier to place a heavy, wet rug with a hose than in a tub. Other rugs can be placed on a table and scrubbed with a brush and mild soap suds. As each section is cleaned, it should be wiped thoroughly and the water should be changed as it becomes discolored. Rugs washed by this method are clean, but they may shrink and lose their shape and the colors may fade and run. Oriental rugs with very long, thick pile should not be thus cleaned unless they can be dried quickly and thoroughly; if moisture remains in the depth of the pile it may rot the threads. United States Department of Agriculture household specialists suggest:

Fine smooth matings should be swept with a soft brush and dusted with a dry mop, or if necessary they may be washed with a cloth tightly wrung out of warm water, and wiped dry with another cloth. All grass and fiber floor coverings should be taken up occasionally to remove the dirt which lifts through in spite of frequent cleaning.

As the banks appeared to be full of money the suggestion looked all right, and Johnston, Sr., and Jr., agreed up on the enterprise, Jr., to do the building, while the Senior financed the enterprise and sold the houses.

As time passed, a more serious were constantly employing several men, one around the mines, they figured that they would have no difficulty in securing and keeping all the water they needed. So it was that while Johnston, Jr., was completing plans and drawings and starting campfires, Johnston, Sr., was visiting all the wholesale lumber yards and within three weeks had our lot of material heading toward Rossford from Middleboro, Attleboro, Uxbridge,

The prices of the buildings which they have constructed have ranged in price from $4,000 to $9,000, and while they are one of the twenty-fifth building recently, all of them except four unfinished, are sold and these have prospective purchasers.

Mr. Johnston says he considers it infinitely better in his endeavor to sell a house for a small cash payment with liberal monthly payments to a live young wife who instantly becomes a hoaster than for a dead wife to succor old grouch who may cast become a knacker or worse than that, sell the same one who is not wanted in Rosemont.

"And so it is that I am even now planning to buy my part in the coming year to the rebuilding of our beautiful city. Business may appear to be a little unsettled, that is the way it goes in the bank in the East, as recently, when the banks in England were closed for nearly a fortnight on account of a strike, and all other business was at a standstill. In the operation, I direct the same. ### SELECTING BEST BEEF CALF

Animal Must Have Proper Conformation, Breed Type and Good General Appearance.

If the best calf selected for milking is to develop into a useful product for individual or breeding purposes, it must be a good calf as well as a descendant of good ancestors. Keep in mind that you are either selecting a calf for a herd bull or for a topper in the string cow. To be chosen as a good calf it must have the proper form, which is sometimes spoken of as type or conformation. If you expect to send a calf with these necessary requirements, you should be concerned first with them. Study pictures of famous animals, note their form. A score card of the breed you are interested in would be invaluable to the different parts of a calf's head and the method of examining them.

In selecting the entire first get a sense of the general appearance. Then, more minutely looking at the structure of the head from 10 to 15 feet observing its weight or growth around the face and formation of quality of the body build type and get an impression of the others. Then, looking at the head and neck, then legs, feet, tail, and hindquarters. If a deer is to be selected, it should not have a appearance of a buck or a doe, but the strong vigorous masculine appearance of a bull. If a doe is selected she should have the feminine appearance of a good breeding cow rather than the harsh, nervous or roughness of a goat.

Then, crossing the roof without putting your hand on a school one time, the strong and narrow. When viewed from the front it should have a short face, a large, wide forehead, sharp, a high wide chest, in short, a strong vigorous constitution. When viewed from the side its back should be straight and level from top of shoulders to tail. It should have a long and smooth

Call of Desirable Type—Note the Bee

Heifer

Interpretations. When viewed from the front, a stallion should present a wide, deep appearance. While as much width as possible is desired, it should not be accompanied with roughness about the shoulders and the legs or hocks. The legs should be rather short, stout, and set wide apart. A call that stunts high from the ground and up in the dark and shallow in the heart girth has little chance of developing into a useful or profitable breeding animal.

After you have found a calf with good general appearance, have someone hold it so that you can put your hands on it. This is the best way to determine what are called "condition and quality." Condition means the amount of flesh and fat the calf has. Select a calf in good growing condition, but not excessively fat. The best calf for breeding purposes should have a great depth of natural flesh and be free from roughness or excessiveness in any way. By running the open hand along the back and sides, with a flick quality of the carcass and value with a slight pressure of the finger tips the minimum and quality of condition may be determined. A calf in proper growing condition while not possessing the depth of flesh of a mature animal should have a smooth even covering of firm though not hard flesh along its back and sides and over the shoulders.

Quality may be determined by the eye of the experienced judge, but the lateral may also be used to advantage. As the following indicate quality: A thick coat of hair that feels soft and color and looks glossy, a loose, pliable skin that does not seem thick, rough or tightly stretched over the body and rather short legs that appear to have strong, clean bones without coarseness or coarseness.

A calf showing early maturity, as indicated by the tendency to put on a lean covering of rather firm flesh to desirable color is of little importance as long as the calf selected has the approval of the breeder of the breed desired. There are cover popular shades and color markings of the different breeds which you will learn from further study of the breed selected.

Ailment May Be Differentiated From Conditions Caused by Psittiferous Ticks or Lice.

Common sheep scab may be differentiated from conditions caused by other parasites, such as sheep ticks, common ticks, and lice by finding the parasite and by the nature of the lesion. If the itching is caused by ticks an examination will reveal the ticks.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR HEALTH

If Your Blood Is Weak And Clogged
With Poisons, Pepto-Mangan
Will Strengthen and Purify It.

When you get over-tired day after day, your system has to get rid of so much waste it can't create new energy fast enough. The result is that your blood is filled with waste matter. It becomes clogged. You are trying to get around with a lot of poison in your system.

You look bad, you feel poorly. You get out of patience easily. Ambition is lost. You just don't care about anything.

That is no way to live. Your blood needs help for a time. It is starved. You will find help in that fine tonic, Pepto-Mangan. Pepto-Mangan purifies the blood and fills it with red corpuscles. In a little while you'll have plenty of rich, red blood and you will not know yourself. It isn't a magic medicine. It contains iron and other ingredients that feed starved blood and make it rich and red. Physicians have prescribed Pepto-Mangan for years.

Pepto-Mangan is sold in liquid and tablet form. Take either kind you prefer. One acts the same as the other. Both contain the same ingredients, but be sure to get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—"Gude's." The full name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan," should be on the package. Advertisement.

What's The Answer?

The figures from Frankfort showing the dependence of heavy coal-producing counties upon their neighbors for funds to defray their county expenses put squarely up to the State Tax Commission a question which that body should not be permitted to dodge.

Kentucky is proud of the development of those great industrial empires. It is thrilled over the millions of dollars poured into vast development enterprises; it is elated that prodigious stores of wealth are dug from the earth and converted into power and into millions of dollars. It is not in unfriendliness that the taxpayers of other counties look in their direction and inquire why, with all their industrial activity and riches, they should fail to play their fair part in the Commonwealth's life by not paying their way. The question certainly cannot embarrass the coal operators. They know well it is no "tax" question; that it is not animated by hostility or by any other motive but is an interest in a just application of the State's taxes. The question is not raised by Louisville or in behalf of Louisville. It is asked in the name of the entire State, from the Mississippi River to the Big Sandy in the name of Simpsonville, Barstow and Wickliffe, Mayfield, Frankfort and Covington.

The question is one that should be pressed upon James A. Scott, Ramey Wells and Lem Davis, members of the State Tax Commission. It is their duty to administer the tax law; to enforce equalization; to watch vigilantly the county assessments. They are permitting burdens to fall upon other counties in behalf of counties abundantly able not only to defray their expenses but to pour a surplus into the State treasury and in reducing the tax rates of the State.

Why so singular an indifference toward the obligations of the great coal fields? Gentlemen of the State Tax Commission, Kentuckians generally turn toward you for an explanation!

DOGS IN BELL PAY MORE TAX THAN COAL.

Remarkable Condition

In Big Fuel Producing County Is Told By Rich Crowe

Richmond, Ky., Dec. 8.—(Journal.)—The fact that the coal operators are paying taxes on the coal they produce, while the coal consumers are paying taxes on the coal they use, is a condition which is being discussed in the county.

This statement was made recently by Robert T. Crowe, Lexington, former Speaker of the House, and author of a bill which would exempt coal from the state tax on coal.

Mr. Crowe is an advocate of a tonnage tax on coal. He also is a champion of good roads movement and has introduced a bill for a special session of the legislature to consider the question of a tonnage tax on coal.

Referring to a recent interview from Mr. Crowe, it was stated that he was making a study of the coal tax and was convinced that the coal operators are paying a tonnage tax on coal, while the coal consumers are paying a tonnage tax on coal.

Because coal prices are abnormal, it is now and are bound to recede, the coal operators are paying a tonnage tax on coal, while the coal consumers are paying a tonnage tax on coal.

Were a production tax imposed on coal, the yield annually would be sufficient to pay the interest on $50,000,000 bonds for roads, in the opinion of Mr. Crowe, and create a sinking fund for retirement of the bonds eventually.

MISSOURI LADY SUFFERED UNTIL SHE TRIED CARDUI.—Says "Result Was Surprising."—Got Along Fine, Became Normal and Healthy.

Springfield, Mo.—"My back was so weak I could hardly stand up, and I would have bearing-down pains and was not well at any time," says Mrs. H. V. Williams, wife of a well-known farmer on Route 6, this place. "I kept getting headaches and having to go to bed," continues Mrs. Williams describing the troubles from which she obtained relief through the use of Cardui. "My husband, having heard of Cardui, proposed getting it for me. I saw after taking some Cardui that I was improving. The result was surprising. I felt like a different person."

"Later I suffered from weakness and weak back, and felt all run-down. I did not rest well at night, I was so nervous and cross. My husband said he would get me some Cardui, which he did. It strengthened me. . . . My doctor said I got along fine. I was in good healthy condition. I cannot say too much for it."

Thousands of women have suffered as Mrs. Williams describes, until they found relief from the use of Cardui. Since it has helped so many, you should not hesitate to try Cardui if troubled with womanly ailments.
